The Let Us Dream Conference provides a platform to share, learn, and celebrate people and social service groups dedicated to uplift the society. Since its inception in 2017 at Louisiana Tech University, the annual conferences have provided opportunities to engage in active conversations grounded in community-improvement-based research, experience, and best practices. The conferences are organized by groups of volunteers and hosted in institutions across the world.

The Conference is a forum for initiating a spectrum of service possibilities and intervention models to promote and support engagement in volunteerism across generations. It was established to effectively network and collaborate with volunteers, philanthropists, and community organizations, thereby empowering them in diverse community-improvement programs.

It opens opportunities for students, researchers, along with practitioners to share from their knowledge and experiences. This synergizes the effort and impact towards community improvement. Volunteers from local communities participating in the conference can engage in fruitful dialogues with visionaries to strengthen their existing initiatives.

Testimonials

Ms. Mary Anitha, Panellist for the
Bangalore Community
Conference 2025

Initially, I expected a typical conference setup with panellists on stage and a question-and-answer session. However, this format was refreshingly different. Participants chose focus groups based on their area of interest, which created space for deeper engagement. Those who joined my FGD were genuinely passionate and brought valuable insights to the discussion. It was an enriching experience where learning flowed both ways. Together, we brainstormed, reflected, and captured our thoughts on chart paper, which the team later presented. The energy, collaboration, and shared learning made it a truly memorable and inspiring experience.

Ms. Debra Craighead, USA
Community Conference
Lead

The Let Us Dream Community Conference is a powerful invitation to grow, both personally and professionally. It reignites my passion for volunteering by fostering meaningful friendships and deepening my understanding of critical community issues. Hearing the stories of local change-makers, university faculty, and students inspires me to take action, both locally and globally. Learning how organizations address health, education, and social challenges leaves a lasting impression and motivates me to be part of the solution.

Ms. Mini Fernandez,
Chair of
Hyderabad Conference,
St. Francis
College for Women,
Hyderabad.

Community Conference was an eye-opening and life-changing experience. It brought together visionaries, professionals, and game-changers and provided invaluable lessons on creating whole communities. The diverse panel sessions on AI and education, maternal and mental health, and social empowerment were deeply thought-provoking and incredibly relevant to today's challenges.

Listening to real-life heroes of the community was emotional and inspiring.
