"A journey of a thousand miles begins beneath one's feet."

The Cartography of the First Step

Every Step Leaves A Trace

There is no map for the ground you are standing on. Maps trace the road ahead, the mountains still blue with distance, but no one has ever thought to draw the square foot of earth beneath a traveler's boot. It is too close, too obvious, too unfinished to matter. And yet it is the only ground that has ever been certain.

A river does not know its own delta. It only knows the next inch of soil it is permitted to soften. So too with the quiet, unglamorous work of change: the organiser drafting one letter, the teacher unlocking one classroom door, the volunteer sitting an hour with one child. None of it looks like the beginning of anything. It looks like the whole of nothing. But every step leaves a trace. Not because it is large, but because it was taken at all, because someone, somewhere, chose to stand exactly here before choosing to move. This is the ground LUD has always worked from. Not the promise of a thousand miles, but the first inch of it: a conversation, a classroom, a single form filled out, each one a mark left behind for the next person to find, and follow.

Partner Spotlight

What do you think about LUD as an idea?

What stands out most to me about LUD is the people behind it, especially the young volunteers. At a time when we often hear that the younger generation is becoming more individualistic or digitally disconnected, it's refreshing to see so many young people come together, take ownership, collaborate, and work tirelessly for a shared purpose. That, to me, is incredibly inspiring. LUD isn't just about dreaming big; it's about creating a community where people actively contribute to making those dreams a reality.

Beyond Gurukul

What effect has being a partner had on you?

Being a partner with LUD has been a truly learning experience. It has given us the opportunity to connect with people who genuinely believe in creating impact, and that aligns perfectly with what we do at Beyond Gurukul. It has also reminded me that meaningful change happens when people with a shared purpose come together. We've built wonderful relationships, reached more people, and walked away with renewed energy to keep empowering individuals to dream bigger and achieve more.

Beyond Gurukul

Beyond Gurukul, founded in Bengaluru in 2021, works in the space between who someone is and who they're still becoming. Co-founders Rashmirekha Sarma and Heena Saini spend their days turning uncertainty into clarity, one workshop, one conversation, one carefully mentored step at a time. Know more

Hear from our Community

What is the most meaningful impact LUD has created, and what lesson from your LUD journey continues to stay with you?

I think the most meaningful thing Let Us Dream has created is a cycle that continues through the people who become a part of it. It passes on a sense of community and a sense of conviction that each person can contribute in their own way and positively influence the lives of others, no matter how small the effort may seem. If I had to describe the spirit of LUD to someone who has never experienced it, I'd say it's a community of people who genuinely value change and are willing to invest their time and energy in something bigger than themselves. It's not the titles or recognition that bring people together, but the shared belief that meaningful change begins when ordinary people choose to show up for others. One lesson I've carried with me from my journey with LUD is that change isn't created by one person alone, instead it grows when people come together, each contributing what they can and inspiring others to do the same. It reminds me of a quote: "In every community, there is work to be done. In every nation, there are wounds to heal. In every heart, there is the power to do it." I think that captures the spirit of LUD quite well.

TICC'26

Ms Catherine Namratha, Operations Co-Chair for TICC 2026, speaks about the quiet architecture behind every gathering, the coordination, collaboration, and shared responsibility that hold a movement together long before anyone sees its results. Her message is a reminder that TICC's ambitions rest on the same ground this newsletter keeps returning to: change built one careful, cooperative step at a time.
