

"We are caught in an inescapable network of mutuality, tied in a single garment of destiny. Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly."

— Martin Luther King Jr., Letter from Birmingham Jail (1963)

The Single Garment

There is a version of the world where a footstep ends where the foot lifts, where a small act of kindness closes quietly behind you like a door. It's a tidy version, and it isn't true. Every step leaves something behind that moves outward past what you can see: a conversation that changes a mind, a hand extended that later becomes a hand someone else learns to extend. This is what King meant by the single garment, not that we are the same, but that we are stitched, bound by a fabric none of us wove alone, where a tear in one corner strains the whole cloth.

This is the harder question this edition asks: a trace for whom? The volunteer who shows up on a Saturday may never meet the child whose life bends slightly because of it. The donor who gives quietly may never see the classroom that gets built because of it. The ground you walk on was shaped by someone else's walking; the ground you leave will shape someone else's, long after you've stopped watching. We are, all of us, wearing the same garment. At TICC 2026, that garment gathers in one room, its scattered threads sitting across the table from one another for the first time, each one carrying a trace of the year that led it there. The least we can do is stitch kindly.

Changemakers

The LUD Changemakers segment was envisioned to celebrate individuals whose quiet acts of service strengthen communities and inspire meaningful change. Across the world, countless people work with compassion, resilience, and commitment to address local challenges in Education, Health, and Social Development. Their wisdom, shaped by lived experiences and deep community connections, often creates solutions that extend far beyond their immediate surroundings.

In keeping with the theme "Local Wisdom, Global Impact," the Changemakers initiative seeks to bring these stories to the forefront, not only to honour those creating positive change, but also to inspire collaboration, volunteerism, and collective action. By recognizing these unsung heroes, the Let Us Dream Conference reaffirms its belief that lasting global impact begins with individuals who choose to serve their communities with purpose and compassion.

EMPOWERING COMMUNITIES

Invitation to Nominate Changemakers

Changemakers are individuals and groups who actively create positive and meaningful change in their communities, organizations, and society. They are visionary, proactive, resilient, and determined to address social, environmental, economic, and other challenges. With a clear vision for a better world, they take initiative, collaborate with diverse stakeholders, and work towards shared goals. At Let Us Dream (LUD), we celebrate and recognize Changemakers whose impactful work inspires others and encourages continued positive change.

We invite you to nominate individuals who have brought transformative change and demonstrated relentless commitment to empower communities.

Nomination Guidelines:

- Kindly note that self-nomination is not permitted. We kindly request nominators to nominate individuals apart from themselves.
- There is no limit to the number of nominations you or anyone else can make.
- Nominated changemakers are invited to join us at CHRIST University, Bangalore for the conference.

Submissions are open till October 7th, 2026.
